The physical reality we humans live in, commonly called the Matrix, is a specially designed Experiment, set up by the Queen of Orion. As an experiment, it comes with a certain ruleset that is in many way tailor-made for this particular 3D reality. Some things work and can be accomplished here, while other things don't work. For example, we humans can't suddenly grow wings and start flying; it's not built into the ruleset of this reality. There are also other rules that are to be followed, e.g. we all have freewill of choice, and the outcome of the Experiment is for souls to graduate and be able to leave this reality. The rules that were set up need to be respected, and some of them we have no other choice than to follow because the ruleset prevents us from doing certain things, such as growing wings and fly.

***

However, those who are part of this Experiment can, if they are so inclined, bend the rules to a certain degree and still abide to them. The A.I.F. Overlords have become experts in doing this, and they have done some of it out of necessity for the sake of their own survival. We will now take the opportunity to connect a few more dots pertaining to how the Overlords came into situations that required them to bend the rules to the extreme, hoping they will get away with it.

***

As mentioned before, Enki and his Fallen Angels from Orion and elsewhere, having been granted to continue the Experiment here on Earth after the Titan War and the invasion of the solar system, were obligated to let graduated souls leave the Matrix and move on to Orion, and at first, the invaders abided to this rule—souls were sent back. However, because Enki, Marduk, and the other rebels had greater plans, which included invading Orion and overthrow the Queen and Khan Enlil, they decided that they actually needed the more insightful souls to remain here—souls who were otherwise ripe to graduate, in order to enhance their own experiment and plans. Therefore, they held onto these souls, and no souls were sent to Orion for a period of time.

***

In order to keep these graduating souls within the Matrix, the Overlords had to come up with a plan without breaking the rules of the Matrix—primarily the Law of Freewill. The idea of spreading narcissism on the planet eventually came up! The plan they formed was designed as follows: the human Elite—the A.I.F. assigned rulers of the Matrix—were to start traumatizing the population in line with certain patterns. This could be in form of wars, conflicts, threats, restrictions, famine, starvation, and many other things. Understanding how the human mind works, they realized that this would fragment the soul, which was also what happened. Then, when these traumatized souls died, they were lured into the Tunnel of Light and programmed to return to new incarnations. But first, the Overlords stripped these traumatized souls of their fragments, which they used in order to feed the Matrix and themselves, and the rest of the fragments were stored to be reused to create narcissists, who don't have a genuine soul, but exist of fragments from different discarnate souls. These soulless beings were then sent to Earth to further traumatize the population.

***

Because time is not an issue for the Overlords, who live more or less forever, they could afford that it would take longer for human souls to evolve by being further traumatized. In fact, this was the purpose with this plan. By using our own soul fragments to "mirror" our own behavior and use it against us, they could both traumatize us and feed off of us at the same time and use the narcissists as our catalysts. This means that after having been subjected to trauma, we can also use our abusers as catalysts to learn more about ourselves and free ourselves from their influence, once we realize what is going on and stop responding to the abusers and turn to self-healing processes. Then, slowly, humans can evolve and eventually graduate. The benefits the Overlords gain from this is that they can feed from it, and they are able to keep human souls within the Matrix for a longer period of time.

However, the Orions soon started wondering why the Overlords didn't send back graduated souls anymore, and they put pressure on the A.I.F., who then felt that they needed to do something. Instead of sending graduated souls to Orion, they decided to send either discarnate narcissists or severely wounded souls back to the Queen—souls the Overlord couldn't feed off anymore. This was a clear breach of the agreement between the rebels and the Orion Empire, and it was not accepted. The A.I.F. justified their action by telling Orion that because they were obligated to send souls back to the Empire as a payback from the Experiment, and no souls were currently graduating, they felt they needed to send something. They also said that as soon as there were souls graduating, they would definitely send them.

***

For a while, the Orions decided to wait things out to see what would happen. In the meantime, the Overlords continued to manipulate the ruleset in order to get as much as necessary out of their own experiment. Soon enough, the A.I.F. stopped sending any souls back because they concluded that they had use for all souls—even the damaged souls and the narcissists.

***

When the Empire realized that no souls at all returned, they stripped the Overlords of their avatars and quarantined the solar system. Stripped of their avatars, the A.I.F. became desperate, and now they were even more dependent upon us for their own survival because they could no longer produce any life energy of their own. In addition, they were still obligated to send graduated souls back to Orion, and they'd better make it happen.

***

This was something the Overlords had no intention to do—they needed us all for their own survival. In order to be able to move around at all, they gave technology to human scientists, so they could create artificial bodies for them that would be half biological and half machine. This way, the Overlords hoped to have solved the immortality issue by becoming cyborgs and later on perhaps completely artificial. However, they still needed to feed from humans in order to get energy supply because they were also disconnected from the Central Fire and could no longer draw any creative energy from there in order to maintain themselves, while we humans could and can. This is when the invaders introduced their twisted perspective on karma. By doing so, they figured out that they could keep souls here forever. If Orion would become impatient, they could say that humans need more time and that we humans have more to learn because we keep messing things up for ourselves.

***

This didn't go over well with the Queen. She understood that the rebels now had found a roundabout way to keep the human soul group trapped here without having to send anyone back. Hence, She demanded that the debt had to be paid in full instead of in increments, or the Overlords would have to take the consequences and run out of energy supply. The choice was theirs—they either would start letting souls graduate naturally and the Overlords would then get a fair trial in Orion, or they could refuse and take the entire Experiment with them into a Hell Dimension, assigned to them by the Queen—a dimension from where there is no return.

***

In their pride and hunger for revenge on the Empire for having been thrown out of there during Lucifer's Rebellion, the rebels decided to continue their experiment and discard the Queen's ultimatum. However, they also felt desperate because they had thought they have all the time in the world to accomplish their goal, but with the Queen demanding full payback, they needed to act quickly. This is why we can see how technology, artificial intelligence, and the Singularity are being pushed so strongly in today's world. They want all our soul energy in one place—in a "Super Computer"—so they can make the final move and get out of here by riding us as their avatars and using the human soul group as cannon fodder in a final war against Orion. If successful, they would avoid taking the consequences of their actions. They now see this as their only option because they don't trust that a fair trial would be to their benefit—after all, it's going to be us humans who will be the witnesses, jury, and judges in the Court of Orion if such a trial will take place. We will determine the destiny of the Overlords with all the cards on the table, and this frightens them.

***

The above is the most possible overview scenario of what has happened here in the Matrix since the invasion, and this is where we stand today. Over the years, I have received messages from people who think this entire Experiment is unfair and that it's not appropriate that the Queen is letting the Overlords get away with all this abuse at our expense, being allowed to break the rules without having to take responsibility for it. I can understand this reasoning, but we need to look at the bigger picture to understand how this works:

***

This is an Experiment and was never meant to be anything other than that. The Experiment didn't stop because the A.I.F. invaded and took over the Experiment. The Experiment continues up to this day. The entire idea was to create an environment where souls have absolute freewill to handle whatever situation comes up. The Queen wanted to see if souls can survive and graduate from a harsh planetary environment and come out from it with more wisdom, compassion, and love. Anyone is allowed to operate freely within the ruleset. The Overlords have probably not broken these rules, although it's been fairly close sometimes; and if they have broken the rules, we humans will be the judges of that because we have the first-hand experiences. It might be tempting for the Queen to terminate the Experiment right now, but if She does, She is doing it because it's getting harsher to the point where the Experiment might fail, but She also might think that this is not a good enough reason. No one, including Her, knew from the start how this was going to turn out because we got free hands and the whole point is that it shouldn't be predictable, or the entire Experiment would be useless. The possibility of failure is part of the Experiment.

***

Another thing to remember is that when the Queen decided to set up this Experiment, She didn't pick souls at random to do this for Her—She did it Herself! The original human soul group, which many of us belong to, are Her "children." We are soul fragments of Her, so in other words, we ARE Her and She is us! Whenever we suffer, She suffers, and when we thrive, She thrives. Now it's up to us to decide—what kind of experience do we want to give ourselves and ultimately our Mother/Higher Self/Collective Oversoul? Do we want to give up and let the Overlords take all the blame while doing nothing, or do we want to accept the situation exactly the way it is at this point in time and do something about it, so that we and in extension the Queen Herself, will get a good outcome from this? Do we want to learn from this, reintegrate, and return to the KHAA with all this wisdom and power we have gained and still can gain while still remaining here, or do we want to continue being slaves to the Overlords and eventually end up in the Singularity just so we ultimately join them in the Hell Dimension? Remember that if we go down with the rebels, it's not just us going down; it's also the soul splinters of the Queen Herself because we are Her. She knew this was going to be tough, so therefore, She didn't expect anybody else but Her to experience this, and that's what we are doing now, as parts of Her. However we look at this, the responsibility to succeed is up to us and no one else. We have the choice to either graduate or to succumb. It sounds desperate, but that's the reality of the situation we are in today.

***

We have also come to a point where more and more people begin to understand the concept of narcissism, even if only in the way it is expressed here on Earth. Now, we are presenting a bigger picture that is connecting the dots. There may be details that are inaccurate, but this bigger picture is definitely a very valid hypothesis to consider and ponder. We can continue fumbling in the dark and take the consequences, or we can start taking action on an individual basis. The more of us who start acting on this, the more people will wake up and do the same. By being examples and change our perspective and our vibrations, we influence a lot of other people—both in our immediate environment and on a distance. We are all connected and others will follow.

***

Although the Overlords introduced narcissism for selfish reasons because they wanted supply and to delay the outcome of the Experiment, they were right about that we humans can use their own project to our favor. This is particularly true now when we can see through their agenda. We can use the narcissists as our mirrors because they will show us where our wounds are and what we need to reintegrate. In other words, they help us learn a lot about ourselves that has been kept hidden in the subconscious mind. They can become our catalysts that can help setting us free. If we don't have mirrors and catalysts, we will not be able to fully recognize our own shadow side, and we can therefore never reintegrate, heal, and become truly whole again.

***

As long as the Overlords give us freedom of choice, which they do, they play within the ruleset by allowing us freewill. We have been pushed into a corner because of manipulation and abuse, but this is how it is, and at this point we need to accept this as a fact and start working on ourselves. We need to separate ourselves from our abusers and realize that they have their issues and we have ours. By blaming them and do nothing, we just play right into their hands—it's all about responsibility for our own condition, while they have to take responsibility for theirs. There is no Savior other than ourselves. By making rational choices, and to question everything, we are on the right path. Critical thinking is something we don't learn in school anymore, for obvious and sinister reasons, so we all need to relearn how to apply that to ourselves and our environment again if we want our freedom back.

***

When we've come to a point where we see the Matrix for what it is, and we disagree with what we've been manipulated into believing, and when we have rid ourselves from all our attachments from this world, we can exit through the Grid as graduates. A soul who happens to know about the Grid and sloppily decides to exit is not a graduate. A graduate is someone who has seen the truth and has been working on himself or herself to become a more compassionate and loving being. Also, if we don't do the homework and PRACTICE what we learn, the chance of leaving, when it boils down to it, is much slimmer. When we seriously and without being compromised decide to exit after this lifetime, the Overlords can't stop us because this is our choice in alignment with freewill, but we really need to MEAN IT! We can't do this half-heartedly.

***

Many people have a misunderstanding of what freewill means. We might think that it is the freedom to do whatever we want without having any obstacles or someone trying to stop us from doing it. This is not what freewill is. Freewill is freedom of choice. Each individual has the freedom to make his or her own choices and deal with the outcome of these choices. If the outcome is not to the person's satisfaction, he or she can make a new and better choice next time. Thus, it is destructive to put blame elsewhere and worry about other people or being's choices—that's their responsibility. We are changing the world by making our own choices that will benefit ourselves and others. A great choice is a choice that involves all or most people involved, but the choice comes from us—our inner selves. That's where we need to look. What we need to do is to disagree with what doesn't benefit us and make choices that are more agreeable to us. This is the only solution that will propel us forward and out of the Matrix.

It's difficult to look at oneself and confront things that we are ashamed of or feel guilty about—it's much easier to point out other people's mistakes and so-called shortcomings, so we don't need to look at ourselves. But by not looking inside, we will never make any significant difference. Service to Others is firstly Service to Self. We help others by helping ourselves—that's how it works! Unfortunately, the New Age movement and much of the channeled material is misleading and often misunderstood in this regard.

***

An advanced human sees possibilities in all challenges. Regardless how difficult or unfair the situation might look like, it happens because we need to experience it at that moment—we attracted it. Therefore, the best thing to do is to look at the situation and ask ourselves, "how can this benefit me?" By doing so, we can gain from each life situation, and we learn and expand our consciousness in the process. This includes looking at narcissism from this perspective.
