Video 51: Inside Out—Left Brain vs. Right Brain/Intelligence vs. Intuition (Transcript) Written by Wes Penre, July 27, 2018

We often use expressions, such as "He is very left-brained" and "She is very right-brained." What we mean by that is that a person who is left-brained is intelligent and uses a lot of logic in his thinking, while the person who is right-brained is coming to conclusions by using intuition rather than what we call "logical thinking," or she might be artistic and/or a visionary.

In this society, we normally need to be left-brained to have our ideas accepted and incorporated by others. We need to show physical or mathematical evidence to be fully believed. If we can't provide this and just share our "inner knowing," people often won't take us seriously. This is very unfortunate and dangerous because a child is very intuitive to begin with, but is forced to accept society's norm. This ability to think with his or her "right brain" will usually diminish or almost fully vanish as the child grows older. Instead, left-brain thinking is encouraged, although creative, constructive and innovative thinking comes from the right brain. Learned and inherited thinking comes from the left part of the brain. By invalidating us from childhood for our intuitive thinking, we create adults with limited thinking capacities, even if the child becomes a science professor. How can a science professor think outside the box (the Matrix,) if he or she refuses or can't use the right brain?

We, who are on a spiritual path and do use our intuition and inner guidance to a large degree also know that we are not thinking with our brain. The brain is a part of the construct and only interprets and encodes signals from the mind, so we can experience this 3D Matrix. But in this video, we will use the brain metaphor to convey our message. What we call the left brain, we could say represents the physical aspect of reality, which is the "conscious mind," and the right brain represents the "subconscious mind."

This brings us to intelligence. What is intelligence? Is it the soul or the body? Many people would probably say the soul, but is it really? How do we define intelligence in this Matrix? It's defined with the ability to solve problems in the 3D reality—in our daily lives. Does that ability come from the amnesiac soul or from the human ancestral line? If we think about it, it comes from the ancestral line. We inherit our intelligence, which is simply the compilation of the intelligence from our mother's and father's forefathers and foremothers. If our mother is a skilled musician, it's highly likely that the child will inherit this skill and hopefully expand on it. Leopold (father) and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (son) is a typical example of this.

Before the Invasion, when this Experiment was still running as planned, a human soul/mind/body was supposed to do it in "one go," which means there was no death and reincarnation. When a soul's body expired for any reason, that soul was done and exited from the Experiment. Left were the experiences that soul had had in her human body, which then was transferred over to the offspring. To begin with, humans (the Namlu'u) were androgynous and created their own offspring, without having the need for an opposite sex partner—they were hermaphrodites. There are still animals on this planet who are hermaphroditic. The Human Experience was accumulated in the human DNA, generation after generation. Therefore, for the Experiment to be a success, the entire human soul group must graduate together.

After the Invasion, the entire structure of the Experiment was changed. En.ki created death and reincarnation. He had the same souls reincarnate over and over, keeping us trapped within this construct, when we should have graduated on an individual basis after one completed lifetime. The way En.ki set it up was not how it was supposed to be. On top of that, he gave us amnesia, and on top of that, he split each soul in a trillion pieces and created new souls in the Between Lives Area (BLA) from a mix of different souls with different experiences. This is where we stand now.

The way things currently are, we still learn how to survive and expand in this reality through our ancestral line, but we have very little assistance from our soul, compared to how it used to be. On Tiamaat, before that planet turned into Gaia/Earth after the destruction of Tiamaat, the soul learned from the human experience and interaction on the planet, and it accumulated all the information. The soul could also be used to gather information from the Universe through nano-travel, where she shot off soul-fires into the dimensions to solve problems or to get assistance from a "higher" perspective. Still, the Experiment was totally dependent on the ancestral line—the body was in the center of the Experiment. In today's world, after En.ki altered the Experiment, the soul is no longer intact like it was to begin with because it consists of all these soul fragments from different souls who all have amnesia. The soul still gathers information, but the accumulated information from our soul is difficult to access because of our current circumstances—there are no original Namlu'u souls that are intact on this planet anymore. We are not the same souls that originally started out here. However, as we grow and heal, we notice that we begin to connect with our inner Self again, and we get more and more access to the subconscious mind, which is all about intuition, guidance, and compassion. The only gatekeeper to our unconscious mind is our own fear. We will make a separate video soon that expands on this a lot more.

Theoretically, this Experiment can still succeed, if the human soul group gets together and completes the process of graduating as a soul group, with more compassion and love than when they started out on Tiamaat. This is one reason why the Experiment is still ongoing.

The astute listeners/readers might ask themselves the following question: if we humans were originally supposed to make it in "one go," without any reincarnation, where did all the souls come from that inhabited the children of the Namlu'u? The answer to this is hypothetical, but still based on what is already written in the Wes Penre Papers (WPP) hypothesis and our videos.

First, how are souls created? We learned in the WPP that souls/fires are created from lightning and water. The human soul group was created at what today is Lake Baikal in Russia. We were of course created on Tiamaat, but the Lake Baikal area survived the explosion of Tiamaat and is now a part of Earth. Some of you might have heard about how people who are struck by lightning often get extrasensory perceptions (ESP) after the incident, if they survive it. This is because there is bioelectricity in the lightning and there is water in the body—the two main components to create life.

I have argued many times that we are the children of the Queen—we are Her direct offspring. What does this mean? Many people have asked me how the Queen looks like, and I have given some answers over time. In essence, She is considered being of the "Dragon race," but does that mean that She always manifests as a Dragon? No, just like star-beings in general, She can take any shape and form. If you want to see the Queen right at this moment, you can—anyone can, unless you are literally blind. If so, you can still feel, touch, smell, and taste Her. In fact, you're sitting or standing on Her right now because the Queen is Mother Earth. This is ONE of Her manifestations. Thus, if you ask me how the Queen looks like, it would be accurate for me to say that She looks like and IS a planet.

With this is mind, how can we be Her children? We are Her children because She, in the shape of a planet, consisting of fires, just like us, let loose lightning to strike in Lake Baikal—lightning after lightning. This is bioelectricity/soul energy coming from the Queen. She was "giving birth" to us in this manner. Therefore, it's reasonable to think that She could create new souls as the Experiment went along, until the human soul group either failed or graduated from Her Experiment. Thus, it's not like the Queen stood on the shore of Lake Baikal in the shape of a woman with a crown—She created us by releasing bioelectricity through the atmosphere. It's therefore reasonable to think that the offspring from the Namlu'u were inhabited by new souls, created as necessary.

After the Invasion, it's also reasonable to assume that the Queen stopped making more souls because She didn't want to contribute with more soul-inhabited bodies in an Experiment where souls are trapped.

This was of course a dilemma for En.ki, who needs more and more souls. I know he tried on his own to use bioelectricity and water to create his own souls, but it is my understanding that he didn't succeed very well. Instead, he started to hijack souls from outside the Matrix, as explained in earlier videos and in the WPP. Consequently, because we now are 7+ billion souls on the planet, most of these souls are hijacked from other places and mixed with the Namlu'u souls in the Between Lives Area (BLA.) This means that most of our soul fire consists of souls outside the original human soul group. Also, because En.ki needs lots of souls, this hypothesis could also explain the "twin flame" phenomenon. Ponder this: En.ki needs as many souls as possible for his agenda, so when the AIF splits our souls and reconstruct them in the BLA, he thereafter splits the new soul into two or more pieces, which means that these pieces are two or more major fragments of the same soul, and this is the reason why people recognize themselves in their twin flame. Some people are looking for their twin flame all their lives, and when they find each other, they feel "whole" again.

Someone in a comment section brought up a very good topic on immortality. Isn't it good, after all, if we die, get amnesia, and come back with a blank slate, instead of on a conscious level bringing with us our own baggage of bad and destructive decisions in a never-ending life? Wouldn't that be an overwhelming burden for the soul, and wouldn't it be boring to live forever?

This is how we see it: in this limited reality, where we don't even have access to 100% of ourselves, but merely 4-5%, it's very difficult to correct all the mistakes and to heal all trauma we've been subjected to through our own thoughts, intentions, and choices. Much of it is buried inside our subconscious mind to which we have limited access in this construct. However, once we're free from our bondage and have returned to the KHAA, we will eventually get access to our entire Self, and when we make bad decisions and are subjected to trauma, we can remedy this because of our hugely enhanced abilities and free access to the different dimensions. We don't need to dig to find things in our subconscious—it is there for us to "see" and experience. Thus, we can make new choices and take immediate responsibility for our mistakes, if we want to call them that. Then, of course, it's up to the individual soul to decide if she wants to take this responsibility, or if she wants to hang on to her pride and competitive attitude in a manner the AIF has done. If so, such a soul will create her own living hell, just like they have done, until they have dug themselves down so deep that it's difficult to dig themselves up again. However, this is not the norm for a star being in general. Also, within our construct, we have freewill—not so in the KHAA, in which we have Freedom rather than freewill. This, our Experiment, is an experiment in freewill, but outside the Matrix it's a Universe of Freedom-NOT freewill. This will be further explained in a new video and is part of new research and insights. This is good news, as we will explain further in an upcoming video.

What we experience on the outside are direct reflections and projections of what we experience on the inside, so we can't really blame anybody else for a situation we're in—in one way or another, we created it ourselves, regardless whether it was willingly or whether it was because we let ourselves be manipulated by someone else. The reality we perceive outside ourselves is the movie we are making for ourselves on the inside.

POST SCRIPTUM: After this transcript was written, on July 27, 2018, Lisa Harrison had a Live Stream on her YouTube channel, where she explained what her contact, LeeLoo, had just recently told her. This information corresponds exactly with what I have written in the WPP since 2012 and onward, including what this Experiment is all about into almost to the details—also including what we've said about narcissism and the termination of souls. I strongly encourage you to listen to that broadcast and what she has to say—I think you'll find it well worth your time. We'll put her URL in the Description box below.
