

Video 78: The Teachings of Thoth Part 3: Why Thoth Doesn't Have our Best Interest in Mind Written by Wes Penre, October 3, 2018

This is a transcript to video:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QhrxLYneGq8&feature=youtu.be>

We understand those who look at Thoth's teachings and think that it all seems so benevolent, loving, and caring, that this being must have our best interest in mind. Upon that, he teaches us how to grow and become spiritually mature. It even seems as if he is trying to show us a way out of the Matrix. At a first glance, it looks like he must have our best interest in mind. Because of this, we need to be extra vigilante and alert. We must not forget who his father is. His father is En.ki, and En.ki is known as a trickster god. Keep in mind that Thoth, in all his incarnations, came to teach the world with his fathers blessing. Why?

This is a reality, heavily based on polarity. As mentioned in an earlier video in this series, Marduk is the macho, masculine character, representing the exaggerated masculine energy, which includes violence, overt control, ultimate power, and authority. En.ki, on the other hand, is the artist, the scientist, and the more spiritual being of the two. He represents the feminine aspect of polarity. He is the "nurturing," "caring" and "loving" god, who expresses these attributes via his son, so he can get what he wants from us, which is food, worship and power. We could say that Marduk is the overt narcissist, while En.ki is the covert narcissist.

Video 78: The Teachings of Thoth Part 3: Why Thoth Doesn't Have our Best
Interest in Mind

En.ki knows exactly what he's doing and how to get what he wants from us, and he's been quite successful so far. Thus, those who are Marduk's/Satan's followers, practice the black arts, which are pure masculine, dominant, and controlling, while those who are En.ki's followers (often unbeknownst to them) practice white magic and choose the spiritual path.

When we decode Thoth's teachings, we need to remember his father's character. Those who have read the Wes Penre Papers (WPP) know exactly who he is and how he is responsible for having started the mess we're in. Therefore, it should be obvious that his son, who runs his father's errands, suddenly won't magically turn this around, return to his father's abode after each incarnation, get a pat on the back by his dad, and then be sent back again, if there isn't an agenda behind it.

En.ki knows exactly how our minds work, and he uses this knowledge against us. Marduk is the Lord of this World, while En.ki is the Lord of the Ether. Marduk has set up this Matrix so we all get traumatized as much as possible, and when we feel we need a break, Thoth comes to our rescue by giving us hope. This way, the gods can win over humans of lower vibrations, who dramatize Marduk's persona, but also lure in those who grow spiritually, via Thoth. Thus, it doesn't matter whom we wittingly or unwittingly follow—Marduk or Thoth—because we still end up in the same place, which is in the realm of the gods, and ultimately in the Singularity.

Video 78: The Teachings of Thoth Part 3: Why Thoth Doesn't Have our Best
Interest in Mind

Thoth, in his different incarnations, is teaching us that there is a way out of this prison, and he gives us ideas where and how to look for the exit. However, he is quick to point out that on the other side waits the Father (En.ki) to take care of us. Thus, what he is preaching is NOT the way out—it's a clever way to win over the heart-based souls, who otherwise might find the REAL Exit.

The more we learn about Thoth, it becomes both logical and evident that Thoth over time has incarnated on ALL continent to spread his messages. As mentioned in a previous video, he has had a lot of different incarnations among humans. In the first video on this subject, we made a list of beings throughout history, who were Thoth, or pupils and/or messengers of Thoth. However, we realize that we only scratched the surface of all his incarnations, in which he has enlightened mankind. The list is MUCH longer than that. Obviously, we can't tell the story of all these teachers in this video series, or it would probably be almost endless, but we will explore the most memorable.

On the flipside, not all teachers and enlightened people throughout history were Thoth, either. Some of them were just expanding on concepts that were previously taught by Thoth and thus, they brought the ideas and the civilization "forward."

Video 78: The Teachings of Thoth Part 3: Why Thoth Doesn't Have our Best
Interest in Mind

The common denominator for Thoth's presence has become obvious to us. What we're looking at here is sudden major changes in civilizations and locations around the world. As mentioned earlier, when a new paradigm or movement has started suddenly, and mankind has reached new heights in their development, an enlightened teacher seems to have been visiting the area prior to major change. Moreover, there are distinct similarities in the teachings between all these teachers, which is an indication that these teachers are one and the same but in different incarnations.

Thoth did not only teach religion and spirituality—he educated us on many different subjects, such as astronomy, astrology, agriculture, stonemasonry, mathematics, alchemy, architecture, science, and languages, and he taught people to write and to use different tools. In other words, he came to create civilizations and to bring tribes and already existing civilizations forward. By using these guidelines to find the places where Thoth was incarnated, any of us could start researching and find more and more of these teachers all around the world.

We think we dare say that if Thoth wouldn't have been present on Earth, we would never have had any civilizations on this planet. We would probably still be living in tribes and smaller communities. Thus, we come to the perhaps most important reason why Thoth came here in the first place. As the readers of the WPP know, we started out on Tiamaat as Namlu'u—the primordial womankind—long before the Invasion. We weren't here to create civilizations; we were here to experience a harsh environment, and alone and in groups, our mission was to figure out how to come out of the Experiment with more love and compassion than when we arrived. We needed no civilizations, no technology, and no knowledge about science, mathematics, and all the rest of it. All of that would just have been distractions. However, when the Overlords took over, they had their own agenda. They needed us to develop in a certain direction, so they could eventually have full control over us. The Singularity is their next step.

Video 78: The Teachings of Thoth Part 3: Why Thoth Doesn't Have our Best
Interest in Mind

If we would have been left alone, we would have hardly developed any of the skills many people value so much in today's society. Therefore, they needed to educate us. The best way to do that would be for the AIF to incarnate here and give us the knowledge we need, and this is where Thoth came into the picture. He "helped" us to build cities, use technology, learn about genetic engineering, build civilizations, and Marduk taught us to fight wars. Thoth also taught us astronomy, astrology, mathematics, and the hard sciences—none of which we would have figured out on our own—how could we? Unfortunately for the AIF, their progress with humanity got interrupted when the Orions decided to end the Experiment with the Great Flood, and they had to start all over.

Trauma and fear have always been part of the Overlords' agenda, and Marduk is mainly responsible for this—he is playing the "bad guy." This was needed, basically because it keeps us in check, and, they can also feed off it. However, to counteract this, to get balance and to have polarity play out, Thoth became the “good guy,” who could give us hope. Although Marduk and En.ki are often in real dispute with each other, we need to take into consideration that much of it is just a game with the purpose to create that kind of polarity.

The more humanity progressed per the plan, completely distracted from the real purpose of the Experiment, and as the population grew, laws had to be instigated and followed, with threats of punishment if they weren't— one thing led to another. Therefore, we also need to reconsider the American Constitution. Most of the Founding Fathers were Freemasons, which should tell us something. The Constitution was another tool in their plan to bring the agenda forward. The Constitution was necessary at the time, and when followed, it gave us an illusion of freedom. However, as we well know, strong forces have, for at least one-hundred years, slowly but surely broken down the Constitution because it's no longer needed for the agenda. The power needs to come back to the rulers because now we're getting close to the many thousand years old goal—the Singularity.

When we build civilizations, personal responsibility goes out the window. We all know that people who live in cities can live door to door but never get to know each other. Never in history have people been so packed together but still feeling so alone. The way today's society is constructed goes totally against our basic needs as human beings, and it destroys us inside. In order for us to accept this, the gods needed us to become more like them to a large degree, and this is another consequence of the trauma we have been subjected to—it lowers our vibrations.

What about crime and destructive behavior? Isn't it good to have a police force that we can call when we see, or are subjected to a crime, so we don't need to intervene ourselves? In today's world, it's become necessary to have a police force, because we are so alienated from each other that we can't come together in groups anymore and fight the crimes ourselves. There were thieves and murderers even before we started civilizations and we still lived in a tribe setting, but if someone stole the other tribe members' food, we can rest assured that the rest of the tribe dealt with it together. Either the thieves had to change their way, and when they didn't, they were told to leave. Everything was dealt with as it happened, and no one had to call the police to deal with the criminal. People worked together, and they took responsibility, without putting responsibility on others. These days, we almost always rely on outside forces to be responsible for us.

We hope that this will bring some additional understand on why Thoth's presence has been necessary more or less from the beginning. We have, in other words, been very sidetracked at best, and are being led to slaughter in a Singularity environment at worst.

Video 78: The Teachings of Thoth Part 3: Why Thoth Doesn't Have our Best
Interest in Mind

We still have much to discuss when it comes to Thoth in upcoming videos.
Please feel free to comment, as usual.