

Video 88: Understanding the Inner and the Outer Universes

Written by Wes Penre, November 2, 2018

This is a transcript to video:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pChlF4PF4iA>

We understand that it is difficult to grasp the difference between the Inner Universe, the Outer Universe, and the correlation between the two. Therefore, we've decided to use a metaphor in an attempt to sort this out.

Quite a few people have asked us, if we are all ONE, aren't we also En.ki and Marduk, and the rest of the Alien Invader Force (AIF)? If so, did we completely create the situation we're in, and if we did, how do we uncreate it?

It is true that we are ultimately them, and they are ultimately us, and that we DID create this situation for ourselves, but there is a catch to this, which makes it possible for beings like En.ki and Marduk to manipulate us, without us realizing that we are. It also makes it possible for us to manipulate each other. Thus, let us explain this with a metaphor that will hopefully shed some inner light on the subject. We're going to start from the beginning...

Let's say that the Divine Feminine (DF), aka Source, God, the Goddess, All That Is, or whatever term we want to use, is a huge Ocean. In the "beginning," this Ocean was all there was. All this Ocean knew was that IT exists, but not much more than that. This Ocean decided to find out more about ITself—what IT is capable of, ITs attributes, who IT is, etc. Because there was nothing outside of this Ocean, the Ocean decided to divide and extend ITself into smaller units to explore and learn. In ITs mind, IT started dreaming and imagining that there could be something outside of IT, although these thoughts were just a part of ITs own Inner imagination.

Next, what IT did was to create thoughts of “othernesses” in ITs mind and pretended that this part was separated from IT. IT sent out these thoughtforms in an imaginary outside location and let these “separate” parts of ITself have their own uniqueness. We usually call these separatenesses Oversouls, but we prefer to call them Spirits. One of these Spirits (the Queen) was put in charge to create Universes, perceived to be outside of the Ocean. We can metaphorically look at these Spirits as numerous rivers, flowing out in all directions from the essential Ocean.

If we concentrate on our own Universe, the many Spirits that were now created, in their turn sent out smaller units of themselves into this Universe to let them explore, create, and learn. We could look at these smaller versions as streams, separated from the main rivers. Each river has numerous different streams going in all different directions. These streams would be us—the souls.

If we think of this as oceans, rivers, and streams, they are all connected to each other by the water—the ocean is connected to the rivers that are connected to the streams—it’s all basically the same thing.

As the streams are finding their ways through the landscapes, they experience new things as they expand “outwards.” Whatever they experience will also be experienced by the river they extend from, as well as the Ocean ITself. Each river and each stream would have their own experiences that were unique to them, and these experiences were then communicated back to the Ocean via the rivers.

Now, let us say that in river number one, many of these streams communicated with each other and decided to travel to another river to take control of all the streams that extended from that river. So, they did, and they also put up dams at the beginning of the streams, where they were previously connected to the river, preventing the water from connecting with the river. Some water was still leaking through, but the connection between the streams and the river became very limited. Now, all the streams were trapped, and they forgot that they were connected to the river and the Ocean. The “visitors” could then take control of the streams. The visitors started manipulating the streams, telling them they were something they weren’t, and that the visitors were Gods to whom they must give their worship. The visitors are of course the AIF and the streams are humankind.

If we go with this metaphor, we see that we all are ultimately ONE with the Ocean (the Divine Feminine), but we, as souls, are also Individual Units of Consciousness (IUOCs to use Tom Campbell’s acronym). Each of us has their own experiences, separate from everybody else. Although the AIF essentially are us on the Ocean level, they are also separate units with their own experiences, unique to each one of them. Therefore, they are able to manipulate us without us being aware—we don’t have their experiences, so they can take advantage of what we do NOT know and use that to their advantage. Thus, we can say that we are them and they are us, but because of the original illusionary separation from the Divine Feminine, we are also unique and don't share other IUOCs experiences. Therefore, blaming oneself for what has happened is not very constructive. Blaming the AIF is equally not constructive because it doesn't solve any problems. So, what do we do?

If we try to go outside ourselves, into the Outer Universe, which is just a projection of the Inner Universe, we won't be able to solve the problem. We don't know how the technology these visitors used trapped us—we never developed that technology, and because they know how to hide from us, we can't really reach them, either. The solution is not to fight them or try to look for solutions in the outside world. At best, it wouldn't lead anywhere, and at worst, it would make the situation worse, because in the outside world, the AIF are superior. We won't know how to remove the dams/Grid they set up because we don't understand their technology.

Instead, in order to shatter and crumble these dams, we go inside and work on ourselves, so we can learn more about ourselves. In other words, we just continue doing what we, as souls, were always meant to do: explore, create, learn, and expand. What happens if we do? As our vibration increases and we become more powerful, the building dams will "crumble" and we find ourselves back to the river again. The AIF can't put up the dams again for those whose vibration is increased because those souls have already seen through the trap and know how to get out. This can only be done by going back to Source, i.e. our Inner Universe, which is also the Divine Feminine's Universe—they are one and the same. We are just smaller fractions of the Whole. And as Einstein said

(and we paraphrase), "You can't solve a problem on the same level it was created."

In a previous video, we brought up the artificial soul, describing it as being an "overlay" of the original soul, which is YOU. We need to go INSIDE in order for us to break down our internal dam, i.e. the artificial soul, by increasing our awareness and vibration. And, as above so below: The Outer Grid is represented in each individual as the artificial soul, onto which we unwittingly give our spiritual power and our soul power. To be able to leave the Matrix, we need to punch "holes" in the artificial soul first, which will reflect on the outer Grid. Then we can leave.

We hope this sheds some light on this subject. Please leave comments and/or ask questions. We don't pretend to have all answers, but the above describes quite well how we see it.