The first time I heard about vertical time was when I was in contact with Life Physics Group—California (LPG-C), while doing research, resulting in THE WES PENRE PAPERS (WPP), “The First Level of Learning.” I found the subject fascinating at the time, but I didn’t realize the full concept of it and how it is connected to reincarnation.

Dr. A.R. Bordon, who was the scientist I was mainly in contact with from this group, firmly stated that we humans only incarnate once into this Construct, and after that, we’re heading elsewhere. I pointed out that there is so much evidence that souls incarnate over and over that there can be no doubt about that this is true. He counteracted with that he knew, from being in connection with the Overlords on a regular basis, that each human only gets “indexed” here once, and it’s technically impossible to incarnate here again. I completely disagreed. Now, however, Ariel and I have started pondering his statement again, as more information has potentially brought more things into light. In order to understand what Dr. Bordon meant, we need to redefine the entire reincarnation process. We want to emphasize that what we will bring up in this video is hypothetical, but the more we think about it, it makes sense, and it explains quite a few things.

Most people think of reincarnation in one of two different ways; 1) the soul is one separate unit, and when she exits the body after death, she goes through the tunnel and eventually reincarnates into a new life, or 2) we live multiple lives simultaneously in different time periods, and when a person dies, it’s only one of many aspects of the soul that goes to the Between Lives Area (BLA) and gets reincarnated—each soul fraction lives her own life, independent of the other fractions.

We think there is enough evidence to say that number 2 is more valid than number 1, but it’s still not telling the entire story of how it works. Anyway, let’s start by expanding on number 2 above.

For many simultaneous lives to be experienced by the same soul, the soul must first perceive herself being split—or at least, her focus must be split, which would be the same thing—her fires must have departed in different “directions” in space and time. How else would it work? For this to happen in a linear time fashion, there must be a veil of amnesia between the different lifetimes because we don’t have any conscious connections between different simultaneous lives.

It’s nothing new that the soul can split itself and bi-locate to different places in space and time—star beings in the KHAA do this all the time. They can be in different places simultaneously by splitting their fires, but the difference between them and us is that they can focus on all their fire fragments at the same time. If one part of the soul is in Alpha Centauri, and another part travels to Ursa Major, the soul can easily focus on both locations interchangeably. Or, they can send parts of themselves to other dimensions to explore potential outcomes for the choices they are about to make. This sounds strange to us, but I have had that confirmed by those who do it all the time—even En.ki and the Overlords can do this. Therefore, we can do it, too, because we also possess soul energy (fires), of course.

To understand how it works for us here on Earth, let's explore the concepts of linear and vertical time. We have often talked about that linear time is just an illusion—there is no real past or future, just an endlessly continuous NOW (present). As you hear or read this, NOW is one present and NOW is another present, but we experience time passing between the two NOWs, and therefore, we perceive time to be linear instead of a constant change of PRESENT perceptions in the NOW. So, let's bring vertical time into the equation.

Beyond this 3-D focus point—in the astral and in the non-physical KHAA—time, as we know it, doesn't exist—everything is simultaneous (we understand that this might be difficult to fully grasp, and we don't understand the full concept, either, but bear with us, and we'll discuss this from our current perspective). Because of this, vertical time can be implemented into linear time, and we'll explain this with a visualization process:

Imagine yourself drawing a long straight, horizontal line on a piece of paper (you can also physically draw this experiment, if that's easier). This is the linear timeline of this Patrix (Matrix) from beginning and way into the future. Now imagine that you, sitting by the table, having drawn this line, also randomly draw vertical lines that cross the horizontal line all the way from the left to right on the horizontal line. What do you see? You see a lot of crosses, don't you? Imagine, at each nexus point where the vertical line meets the horizontal line and the crosses intersect, a part of your soul is born. As you can see, you have multiple incarnations across the timeline.

Now, let's say that these vertical lines were drawn all at the same time. If the linear timeline exclusively represents physical 3-D reality, and vertical lines represent insert points from the more or less timeless non-physical realm, where we could say that the soul resided before incarnating, it's easy to insert different fractions of ourselves at each nexus point from vertical time. Thus, you will live, let's say one thousand lifetimes simultaneously, and because of this veil of disconnection that is put upon you, you usually can't perceive our other simultaneous lives. Still, if you live now, in 2019, where you perceive that your focus is, the part of you that lives in the 1600s, let's say, is completely focused there, just as much as you who listen to this believe your only focus is here in 2019. None of these thousand incarnations is more valid and more focused on than the other, and all these lives happen RIGHT NOW in this present moment.

This is also why there is no real past, and it's certainly not set in stone. You have your own perceived timelines in 3-D, and every other soul on Earth has their own. Not only that, but all our incarnations affect each other. When you make a decision today, it influences all your other lives instantly, and when another aspect of you in another time period makes a decision, it influences you in your "current" life. Thus, everything is fluid, and this is where parallel timelines come into the picture. If you snap your fingers right now, you have a certain timeline from beginning to end that is happening right now, and if you snap your fingers again right now, your timeline has changed based on all the decisions made by you and other incarnations. Thus, you alone have an almost infinite number of timelines that always change. If we then take the entire human soul group into consideration, the number of timelines increase exponentially!

What about our perceived future? Well, if you have followed this narrative thus far, and it makes sense, then we also need to take the future into consideration. The one-“time” simultaneous incarnations we originally made, where we split ourselves, also include future incarnations, of course. You, who are focused on this video, are just one incarnation of maybe thousands on a long linear timeline that also is fluid, as explained above. This means that a part of you might already be in the Singularity, and a part of you might even invade the Pleiades in the future as a cyborg. This explains why Marciniak’s Pleadians want to change our timeline, and why the P’s are showing up here and now. As they said in their sessions, they calculated when the exact nexus point was on the overall timeline of the human soul group when we made the decision to start becoming AI and move towards the Machine Kingdom (Singularity), and that was between 1987-2012. If they were able to make us change our minds during this time period, the Singularity wouldn’t happen, and the invasion of the Pleiades wouldn’t happen, either. They admit that it was a long shot, but they felt they had no choice but to try.

But again, this is not all of it. Ariel and I have thought a lot about these things lately, and we more and more begin to see the valid point in what Hidden Hand wrote on GLP in 2018. He said that we don’t reincarnate into a completely different life—instead, we repeat this and all other lifetimes over and over, until we make better choices and are accepted by En.ki to ascend through his Ascension Program. This means that you have lived this exact lifetime maybe a thousand times before, repeating most of the same mistakes, but maybe changed a few things here and there, either making “improvements” or made decisions that lowered your vibrations that set you back. We repeat the same cycle over and over. This goes for ALL incarnations we have simultaneously. Also, think about it; what does reincarnation and re-cycling mean? It means we re-do what we already have done! Otherwise, other terms would be used to explain the process, such as “new incarnation” or “different incarnation.” We simply don’t even understand the words we are using. We assign other meanings to them than their true definitions.

This also explains karma and the life review we are subjected to between being recycled into repeating our “previous” life. We are shown our progress and setbacks in this BLA life review, and we are told that we need to work on our karma. Then, we’re given amnesia (nice, isn’t it?) and sent back again, not even remembering what it was we agreed to improve. In other words, each lifetime, we start from scratch and hopefully make better decisions.

But why is En.ki doing all this? Well, following this train of thought, the answer is simple. En.ki has a contract with Orion, where he has promised to let souls graduate and be sent home to Orion. In his mind, he has not breached that contract, although he is doing it “his way.” Before he lets us graduate and leave the Patrix, we first need to ascend through his densities. When we’ve reached his highest levels of ascension, he lets us go. However, that might take almost an eternity because he also gave us amnesia to delay the whole process as much as possible because he needs us for his survival. He can also feed on our increased spiritual awareness (more soul energy), but we also have the chance to advance, so in his mind, everybody wins. To delay this whole process even further, he is also inserting “empty vessels” to traumatize us, so we make poor decisions by reacting to the abuse and take on some of the aspects of the vampiristic abusers and we create thought-forms that work against us. At the end of the day, he thinks he can say he didn’t breach any part of the contract because his intention always was to let souls graduate.

The most probable reason why Dr. Bordon insisted we are only “indexed” here once is that we are just repeating the same lifetimes over and over within the same 3-D reality, and when we “graduate” from our physical existence, we go to En.ki’s non-physical realms that vibrate differently within the Patrix overall frequency range. And because we repeat the same life over and over, it also explains Déjà vu. Occasionally, people feel that they've experienced something before—it's just a "flashback" from a "previous" incarnation within the same time loop. An occult symbol for this loop is the Ouroboros—the snake that eats its own tail.

Because of what we've discussed here about linear versus vertical time, we can also see how the Overlords have been able to incarnate here in different time periods and done so simultaneously. Thoth, for example, has incarnated here quite a few times on our linear timeline as different entities. This happens simultaneously, by him splitting his fires, using them to animate different bodies, such as Thoth, Hermes, Jesus, Noah, Ningishzidda, Quetzalcoatl, and Enoch, etc. Moreover, this also explains how En.ki and Isis could incarnate as different people, more or less within the same time period (Sumerian times, for example), and they appear to be different beings, when in fact they are just two in number with different aspects of themselves incarnated simultaneously to make it look like there were a lot of Anunnaki (Overlords) here at the same time. There were probably more Overlords here, but they are not, or very rarely, mentioned by name or title in the ancient texts.

While I was writing the WPP, Levels 2, 4, and 5, I was told that death is something En.ki invented, and the Namlu'u (original humans on Tiamat) didn't die—they were designed to complete the Experiment in "one go." Still, the Namlu'u were sexual in nature and therefore created more bodies as they went along (they were androgynous). How did that work, did the bodies expire after all? They might have, in accidents or for other occasional reasons, but it was probably not common. Instead, the Namlu'u souls perhaps split themselves to create more aspects of themselves to have more profound experiences, and these aspects animated the new bodies that were created. Then, when the Namlu'u graduated, they just recollected all these aspects of themselves and made themselves whole again, where after they returned to Orion.

So, what happens when we exit through the Grid, having so many different aspects of ourselves scattered around in this Construct? But first, WITHIN the Construct, one of two things can happen, as we see it. 1) If one aspect of us graduates in En.ki's System, all other aspects of us will merge and we'll be able to leave, or 2) each aspect of us needs to graduate individually, and the ones that graduate first need to wait for all the rest to graduate, as well. We tend to believe that number 2 is what will happen, also based on Robert Monroe's research and personal experiences (see his book, "Far Journeys"). But what about if we exit through the Grid?

From what we can see, one of two things might happen then, as well; 1) only the aspect of you that is exiting will return to Orion, and your other aspects will stay until they come to the same conclusion as the aspect that escaped, or 2) once you exit, the other aspects will automatically merge.

We have reasons to believe that number 2 is the valid one. I discussed this to some extent with my anonymous source years ago. I asked what will happen to all the other parts of me that are stuck in other lifetimes once I exit through the Grid, and he said, "if that would happen, don't you think that the Mother Goddess will take care of that?"

What did he mean by that? The way I understand it, from knowing him, is that the other aspects will not be left behind, but if I was worried about that, the Mother would withdraw these aspects from the Construct anyway, so we're safe whatever happens. If so, why would She withdraw our other aspects, just like that? Because one aspect of you chose to leave, and it was your freewill choice. Therefore, it is perfectly in place to withdraw all your soul energy from this Construct, based on your choice to leave.

We hope this video has given you some food for thoughts. Feel free to discuss this in the comment section below. As usual, a link to the transcript to this video will be in the description box below.
