Welcome back to another Q&A Session, and thanks for all your contributions! Feel free to submit more questions at wespenreproductions@gmail.com and put “Q&A” in the title, so we won’t miss it. Also, don’t forget to turn on the closed captions if you want English subtitles...

QUESTION 1: Not sure if I experienced OBE, when I was dreaming, I saw myself lying [in bed], and when I tried to touch myself, I woke up. I also see myself sometimes on the top of the earth while asleep, and then I try to get down on earth, and the sensation is real. When I try to abort it, I wake up.

ANSWER: Yes, those definitely sounds like OBEs. We all have OBEs every night but are not aware of it. Every time we dream, we are out of the body. Sometimes, we don’t go far, but sometimes we do.

QUESTION 2: Can the fact that we live our lives repeatedly in cycles of time also explain premonitory dreams? I have had several dreams in which I have lived them in real life exactly as in the dream, with the same image and details. How can these dreams anticipate what will happen? Can these be "memories" of a previous life in the same time cycle, as is the case of deja vu, but in dreams?

ANSWER: Good questions! Yes, it might explain premonitory dreams because your "future" in this life has already been relived before in previous life cycles (although you might make other decisions this time, so some of these dreams might no longer be valid). You are very likely correct in your thinking.

QUESTION 3: Could you please expand on the term (phrase) "bad copy" as referred to in your videos. I am wondering about nature, especially the mountains, rivers, oceans, wildlife and many beautiful things I have experienced. If this place is a "bad copy" then how magnificent must be the original?! could you describe the differences?

ANSWER: What you are experiencing as nature here on Earth is only 4% of what exists in that nature. What you experience as a tree, for example, is a very limited perspective of the entire being of that tree. Right now, you can only experience a tree with your five physical senses. You can touch it, taste it, see it, hear it, and smell it as it is expressed in 3D. Imagine if you could see its aura and how it is connected to everything around it including you, feel its vibrational energy, communicate with it and have it communicate back, see it growing right before your eyes, perceive the colors of the tree beyond our limited light spectrum of colors, observe how it interacts with the animals who live and play in and on it. Use your imagination and know that when you interact with nature or animals, you are only interacting with 4% of what is really there. This also goes for humans. This is the best we can do to describe what this may be like in its original form. Take what you know, use your imagination, and fill in the rest with all the possibilities you can think of and remember that there is even more that you cannot imagine. When you interact with a tree, an animal, or another human while keeping this in mind, you are connecting with the KHAA. This is extremely effective.

QUESTION 4: ...when I left my body, before I ever knew anything about you, before the internet...my first instinct was to look directly above me, but I saw no grid...which makes me wonder, is it still up? If it was not there for me to see it then and why could I not see it? Because I was not dead...?

ANSWER: Yes, you answered your own question. You were not dead. This means that you were still connected to your body through the so-called “silver cord,” and that still kept you stuck with limited perceptions. Although your perceptions increase when you have an OBE, the vibration is not high enough to tune into the Grid structure. You need to get rid of the body first.

QUESTION 5: If a person dies, then escapes through a hole in the grid, how will they know which way to go once they are outside? I imagine the vastness of the universe would be disorienting and confusing to someone that just spent several lifetimes with an extremely limited perspective. Would Orion be recognizable? Would there be several similar places that might confuse someone when searching for Orion? How would a lone soul travel in the vastness of space? Is it a matter of “force of will” to propel yourself towards a destination, and it just happens?

ANSWER: When you’re outside the Grid, everything is new and unknown, and logically, you will not know where to go. However, we are not traveling with spaceships or from one place to another many light-years away—that’s a deception. We travel with our minds. So, when you find yourself outside the Grid and want to go to Orion, for example, you just think “Orion” and you will be there in an instance. You don’t need to know where it is. Or even better (if you choose to go to Orion), you can think, “I want to go to Orion and meet the Queen.” The KHAA is very thought responsive. And if you find yourself in the wrong place, just do the same thing again or change your thoughts slightly. But just using the above thought and intention should do it. Don’t put any “force” behind your thoughts, though. A light and focused thought is all that’s needed.

If you are unsure and uncomfortable with what your choice will be, then simply intend to be in an area of safe vibration after you leave. You can remain there until you have figured out what to do next. There is no pressure or directive to go anywhere, even to Orion. That choice is up to us. We’ll know more and be better able to know what our options are when we are free of this place. For some of these things, we will just have to trust ourselves and know that we will go where we need to go. There are some things for which we will not know the answers until after we leave.

QUESTION 6: Lately it seems the world is in a divide of political chaos. Its concerning - Do you think it was at all instigated by the overlords? And if so for what purpose? Could it be just the standard routine of maintaining the global chaos for them to be able to feed from its energies?

ANSWER: Yes, it's all originally planned by the Overlords. What we're living in now is the Old System, but the New System is about to be rung in. For that to happen, the old must be removed and the new must replace it. One of the "Hidden Hands" (Elite insider) on the GLP forum said that our current U.S. President is here to ring in the New System. This is why we see all the corruption in high places being exposed—all the way up to the higher mid rank of the Elite and the British Royal Family—and more to come. There are many potential purposes, such as; a One World Government, a fake alien invasion, a preparation for a soul harvest, the Singularity... It's a "Changing of the Guards." Our advice would be to not get distracted by what goes on in these areas. Let them have their chaos. We can choose not to get attached to their outcomes.

QUESTION 7: In the WPP you said a soul completely disintegrates when caught in a nuclear explosion. Let's say a spirited person is caught in a blast - without a vessel to experience the KHAA with does their full awareness automatically go back to their spirit (outside of spacetime)?

ANSWER: Yes, if your soul gets completely disintegrated, you will merge with the Queen, who is your Oversoul. You will become Her, and you would exist as a series of experiences "inside" the Queen, just like what you experienced last week is now inside you.

QUESTION 8: In one of your recent comment on the Q&A video you mentioned that without human soul vampirism this construct would fall apart. Can you explain that in little detail?

ANSWER: This construct and the beings who operate within it are using our soul energy as literal food (there really is no human word for what this is to them because they are not physical beings) and that energy is also being used to keep the electromagnetic vibration of the planet within a certain frequency. If we no longer allow these beings to feed from our soul energy, they starve. If they starve, the technology being used to hold this construct in place has no fuel and will collapse.

If the entire human soul group, who is now being vampired on, would stand up for themselves and refuse to take anymore of it and disobey everything the Overlords, though societal manipulation, have made us create, and everybody realized that none of this is real, and that it's all in our heads and of our own making, the Overlords would have nothing to feed on. The Construct would fall apart. Our belief systems would crumble, and if they crumble, our entire "reality" would disintegrate.

QUESTION 9: Are you okay when I spread your information to others with reference to your work?

ANSWER: Absolutely! That would be awesome. Thank you!

QUESTION 10: I am constantly torn between having a lot of emotions and being emotionless. The problem is: if you have too much emotions, you create a lot of tasty energy for them to eat. But if you begin to get more and more cold and without emotion. You become one of them, a coldhearted robot. So, what's better or worse?

ANSWER: What you're expressing are two extreme ends of the emotional spectrum. True humans all have emotions, whether many of them might be suppressed or not, but no emotions (numbness) and excessive, overwhelming emotions, are both based on trauma. Emotions are there so we can use them constructively and consciously, but trauma, which releases excessive emotions and/or numbness, get stuck in the subconscious, and when triggers in life happen, these overwhelming emotions come to surface. We only know one solution to this and that is to learn how this works, and when these triggers happen, practice on overriding them. Acknowledge that these emotions are there and that they are wounds that are triggered, and then work on looking at the situation that is causing these emotions to surface. Often it has to do with boundaries—something people who've been abused often lack. Someone or something has come into your space and you reacted either with numbness or excessive emotions. Therapy can help, but we have yet to see therapy resolve the problem, although it can help us come to the point where we can override these emotions, or lack thereof.

The Overlords can't feed on your emotions if you have clear boundaries. Set them up for yourself and tell yourself and the "Universe" that you will not allow anybody to steal your energy. This is your sovereign space and you accept no intrusion. The goal is that you should be able to show any emotion you want without getting fed on. If you notice someone feeds from you while just being you, set up a boundary. It's okay to tell the person that he or she is acting out of line and you have the right to think and express yourself as you wish because you're not doing anybody any harm.

We shouldn't try to stop having our emotions. Being able to express our emotions is critical to our well-being. If we try to suppress our emotions, we can damage ourselves, both physically and mentally. The only thing to keep in mind is that we should be careful to express those emotions in a way that is not giving that energy over to someone else. There are many people on this planet who are feeding upon the energy of others. If someone is trying to make you feel sad, angry, or afraid, then that is an indication that the person is using your energy to feed from and they gain by receiving that energy from you. They may not be aware they are doing it, so no resentment or accusations are necessary. Just be aware of how others are trying to make you feel and do what is necessary to stop that exchange. Be careful that you are not repeating the cycle back to them or to others. For example, if someone is trying to hurt your feelings by insulting you, don't insult them back as a means to disengage from the energy exchange. That would actually create the opposite effect. As for producing energy for the gods, the best way to not feed them is to do what you need to do to become happy in this life. They do not feed on your contentment. Work on being content and at peace in your life.

QUESTION 11: You say that it's wrong to say, that we are currently living in a "soul school", where we evolve from low spiritual knowledge to high spiritual knowledge, as we were always royal/creator gods from the start. But if this is the case, there was still the original experiment? If we were "perfect" from the start, why did the queen even start with the experiment on Tiamaat? So somehow there seems to be still potential for us to grow wiser/better as a creator god (maybe even here in this patrix)?

ANSWER: We weren't "perfect" in the original Experiment. If anything, we were new souls with very powerful potentials, but we were also naïve to begin with—naïve and playful—just like children. We started the Tiamaat Experiment from scratch and learned as we went along. We were innocent at first, but we were learning to survive in a relatively harsh environment. It went just fine, until the Invaders came and interrupted the Experiment. The Namlu'u (us at that time) were not warriors. Wars were unknown to us, so we could not defend ourselves against the Invader force. There will be potentials for us to grow wiser so long as we're still existing in the Universe. We could say it was a school while on Tiamaat, but here, we mostly learn from pain and suffering. We still learn, but the school concept with complete freewill is no longer implemented.

This system is a mimic or a copy of an original design. Remember, En.ki cannot create but only manipulate what already exists. So, his soul school design must be modeled from an original concept that was the human Experiment. We can definitely work with this design while we are here. It is our nature to grow, learn, and develop. This is still the original nature of our being. We are already creators in that every thought we have manifests within our lives. It is happening whether we are aware of it or not. We are creating our reality every single “second” that we exist. The question is whether or not we, with such an extreme range of emotions available and core to our being, can recognize this and begin to consciously create rather than subconsciously create. We weren’t perfect from the start. For the original Experiment, could we overcome our own imperfections/reactions and our harsh environment to learn how to effectively create on our own? So, yes, some remnants of the conditions to the original Experiment must still be present in En.ki’s experiment. It wasn’t supposed to be this harsh, however.

QUESTION 12: If there do not exist any differences between old and young souls.. . And only spirited souls long for their home, and so they question reality and research... then there exist only a few spirited souls here? I mean... We (the awakened one) are so few in numbers. Can’t believe we are the only spirited souls?? I mean, why do I begin to research and question? But, if every spirited soul is researching, we must be a very little Soul Group then? I don’t understand that point.. Why do some awake and others don’t, if it has nothing to do with the Number of Reincarnation or with the amount of gained wisdom? You once said that coincidence does not exist, so there must be another reason?

ANSWER: We do accumulate wisdom as we recycle over and over, again. The question is whether or not we can wake up and remember it? For some, they are so burdened by their physical reality and relationships that they get distracted and are just focused on surviving rather than any process of spiritual development. It isn’t necessarily that they are not spirited. They are just so traumatized by their relationships and the system of control and manipulation in this world that the spirit is basically “asleep”. We have all the non-spirited beings on this planet who effectively carry out this agenda in successfully keeping us from focusing on and reconnecting with this aspect of our being. For others, they ARE spiritually developing, but that growth is being redirected into various religious dogmas and programs, so they do not know their true history. There is a certain wall or barrier that religion creates within a person that is extremely difficult to penetrate. In the Wingmakers material, this was described as a “search for God” program that was inserted into the artificial overlay which is attached to our avatar. We will tend to have an innate desire to search for God just by our design. Religion was given as a path to channel this desire, albeit in the wrong direction. By En.ki placing himself in the position of God, he knew that by the Law of Attraction we would automatically be pulled to him. We can’t say what creates that awakening process in some and not others. It is true that most of us come to this awakening through experiencing some kind of pain which causes us to take a close look at our circumstances and search for answers. For others, when they experience such circumstances, they instead turn to their religion for answers and comfort. We do not know how many original spirited souls are here, but we think it is relatively small compared to those who aren't. But let's pretend we are only 3% of the population (although we believe we're more than that), we would still be almost 250 million soul units. If we are 10%, we would be 800 million, which is not too bad. Now, let's say that each soul is split into 500 units spread across the lines of time, we would be around 1.6 million genuine complete souls. Maybe that was enough for the Queen, as a first experiment, to see how it went.

Most of us wake up because we have made choices from living the same life over and over. Eventually, we "get it" that this Construct is corrupted, and we start looking for answers. Non-spirited beings won't necessarily do that. So, we do learn from living the same life over and over, but very slowly. Also, we are unconsciously connected to all our other simultaneous incarnations, and each incarnated soul aspect of you and the decision she makes, also affects you, and vice versa.
